The patrons

“Thanks to the interactive format of Europe-Mobile, young people in our region are able to broaden their knowledge of the EU. And what is more, they are given an additional incentive to make use of the advantages and opportunities offered to them by the EU.”

Adam Struzik
Marshal of the Masovian Voivodeship, Poland

“With its clear, comprehensive information, Europe-Mobile enables young people to discover the opportunities the European Union offers them concerning mobility and their professional and personal development in general.”

Matthias Platzeck
First Minister of the Federal State of Brandenburg

Bringing Europe into schools

Europe-Mobile aims to reach pupils and university students. 20 students from various countries of the European Union ride the bus – the Europe-Mobile – to several secondary schools within a different region of Europe each year, offering pupils workshops on European issues.

The goal is to get young people interested in Europe and to enable them to experience European integration first hand. This way, the participants get to know their neighboring countries better. Not only is their commitment to Europe enhanced, they also show more enthusiasm for the European idea, bringing Europe even closer together

What's so special about Europe-Mobile?

Europe-Mobile appeals to young people from all countries of the European Union. Europe-Mobile strengthens cross-cultural skills, enabling pupils and students to experience Europe first hand. In workshops, they discover what impact the European Union already has on their everyday lives, and the possibilities it opens up for their future.

In addition to acquiring knowledge, pupils also get the chance to use their foreign language skills. Before visiting the schools, students are given contextual and didactical/methodological training, and gain experience in teaching and project management. Europe-Mobile also appeals to teachers because they become acquainted with new didactical approaches, enabling them to add an exceptional module to their lessons.

The Europe-Mobile programme

- :: In September/October, students travel to a different region of Europe each year for around three and a half weeks.
- :: Students prepare for working with pupils during a one-week seminar. Supported by experienced seminar leaders, they devise teaching material and prepare four workshops.
- :: Over a period of two weeks, students travel by Europe-Mobile to visit a different school in the region each day. Students introduce pupils to the project in a kick-off event, and then organise two-hour workshops with them.

- :: The topics dealt with in the workshops always focus on current European issues. The central questions are:
  - :: What has Europe got to do with me?
  - :: What opportunities does Europe offer me?
  - :: How can I make an active contribution to shaping Europe?
- :: During the program, pupils get to learn more about how they can become mobile within Europe at an information fair with associations and initiatives that operate throughout Europe.
- :: The project ends with a closing event involving civil society and political representatives. This event focuses on an overarching European topic that endeavours to bring the European idea closer to pupils and students in a practical manner.
